ALL THE NOMINATING SPEECHES WERE MADE

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, JUNE 18.—(5:05 p.m.)—THE ROLL CALL OF STATES WAS COMMENCED SHORTLY BEFORE FIVE O'CLOCK AND COMPLETED IN A VERY BRIEF PERIOD OF TIME—WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT WAS PLACED IN NOMINATION FOR THE PRESIDENCY OF THE UNITED STATES BY AN OVERWHELMING MAJORITY AND THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE RESULT WAS GREETED WITH DEMONSTRATIONS OF THE WILDEST ENTHUSIASM.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, June 18.—Chairman Lodge of Massachusetts called the convention to order at five o'clock. This morning, Howard John Wesley Hall, D. D., of Brooklyn then gave the opening invocation.

This was followed immediately by the report of Senator Hopkins of Illinois, who presented the report of the committee on resolutions.

This report was the one signed by the majority of the committee and the minority report was to be presented by Congressman Cooper of Wisconsin.

This platform as presented to the session was the same as that published in Tuesday's Gazette with the exception of the injunction plank. Slight changes have been made in the wording of several of the different planks. These changes have been made in the references to the Panama canal, disfranchisement of colored voters and the tariff, but do not in any way alter the sense.

Senator Hopkins concluded reading his report at 11:16.

Senator Lodge immediately moved for a consideration of the previous question on the report and that the minority report be given. Congressman Cooper of Wisconsin then presented the minority report.

This report consisted of resolutions which insist upon the physical valuation of railroads as a basis of proper adjustment of the rate as decided by the United States Supreme court.

Publication of campaign contributions. Election of United States Senators by direct vote.

No railroad rate to be advanced until after the Interstate Commerce commission has had an opportunity to judge of its justice.

These planks were presented to the committee as a whole, but were rejected by them.

They typify the attitude of La Follette element as to the matters of national importance.

Forty minutes was given for the debate, to be divided equally between the opponents and those favoring.

Following Mr. Cooper's speech and the presentation of the minority platform came the vote.

It was a most decisive defeat for the minority, the final vote being 950 to 28.

Each plank was voted on separately, the vote being for adoption, 28; the Nays, 950.

The question of adopting the platform as presented by the majority report was then taken up and it was adopted by a viva voce vote, the clerk calling the roll.

Then came the nominating speeches. This was accomplished by a call of the states by roll.

Congressman Henry Sherman (D.-Ill.) presented Joseph G. Cannon's name to the convention. Mr. Sherman placed the name of Joseph G. Cannon in nomination in a well turned speech, in which he paid tribute to the state of Illinois and also to "Uncle Joe." Lincoln and Grant had their part in national affairs.

Responsibility of carrying both of the houses of congress was impressed upon his hearers and Cannon's work as speaker of the House commended upon, showing the responsibility of nominating a man versed in public affairs as Cannon.

The speech was seconded by Congressman Foraker of Michigan, who paid more tributes to Illinois statesman.

Amid the greatest cheering Governor Hanley of Indiana took the platform to nominate Charles Warren Fairbanks. Governor Hanley used his silver-tongued oratory to the best of his ability and was heard in all parts of the vast convention hall.

Rich in metaphor and compliments to the nation and the republican party, Governor Hanley's speech followed.

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

down through each state, paid tribute to Lincoln, Morton, Grant, McKinley and Roosevelt and asked for Indiana the honor of offering Charles Fairbanks as the party's candidate for President.

Fairbanks was endorsed and each sectional portion of the United States was begged to aid in his nomination. His work as vice-president. It was said, deserved high honors and further recognition.

Fairbanks as the man, Fairbanks as the politician, Fairbanks as his work for the party he seeks to represent as its candidate for President all were played upon.

When New York was called on the roll of states General Stewart L. Woodford was recognized and amid the applause of the New York delegation came to the platform to place in nomination Governor Hughes of New York.

Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio then took the platform amid the greatest enthusiasm shown thus far in the convention and placed in nomination William H. Taft as Ohio's candidate for the presidential nomination.

It was some time before Mr. Burton could make himself heard as he proclaimed the words of praise of the present administration, the strength of the republican party and what it stood for, and the part William H.

Taft had played in making history.

Mr. Burton extolled his candidate, paid tribute to the republicans who have preceded in the honor he seeks, Ohio as the state, Ohio as the loyal member of the Union were dwelt upon and Taft's history as a public official and his achievements was taken up in detail.

Taft's adaptability to meet any contingency that might arise through his familiarity with the world at large and his close touch of present affairs were all urged as reasons for his nomination.

Taft's nomination was seconded by George A. Kilgilt of California.

Immediately following Burton's speech the greatest enthusiasm provided which lasted for twenty-five minutes. Delegates paraded the aisles and carried banners.

Congressman C. B. McCoy of Ohio

then presented the name of Joseph B. Foraker of Ohio in nomination.

A. Emery, a negro delegate from Georgia, seconded Foraker's nomination.

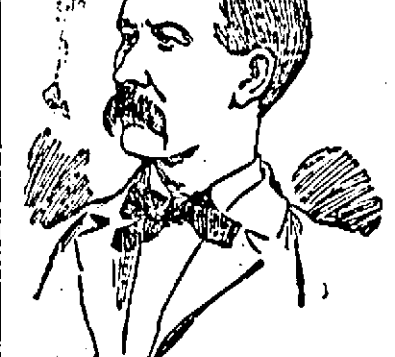

When Pennsylvania was reached on the roll Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Murphy of that state was given the floor and placed in nomination the Keystone state's choice for President, Phillander C. Knox.

Pennsylvania as the state, as the birthplace of the nation, as the scene of the great struggle of the civil war, were taken up in turn before the speaker laid claim to the nomination hours for his state in behalf of his candidate for past services to the party and nation.

Knox as the man, as the friend of McKinley, as the representative of the people in the senate of the United States and his fitness for further honors followed.

When Wisconsin's turn came Henry F. Cochems of Milwaukee was given the floor and proceeded to place in nomination Robert Marion La Follette. Cochems' address was filled with the praise of his candidate and opened with reference to the fact four years before La Follette and his delegates had been denied admission to the convention, but that they returned four years later with La Follette himself offering for the presidential honors.

He dwelt upon the fact the issues that confront the nation today are

LIFE STORY OF SECRETARY TAFT AT A GLANCE.

(Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, New York.)

This remarkable grouping presents a picturesque exhibit of the life, expansion and good nature of William Howard Taft who was nominated today at Chicago as republican candidate for president of the United States. A few specific instructions will be interesting in reading the photographs. At the left of the picture is a little child with curls. This represents Mr. Taft at the age of three. Directly above and at the right is a picture of Mr. Taft at the age of eight. Again at the right and a little above, in a light suit, as Mr. Taft at the age of 11. Immediately across, at the right, is Mr. Taft at the age of 15. Below and at the right is Mr. Taft at about 20, in his junior year at Yale. Just below the top and center, the picture showing Mr. Taft in judicial robes shows him as judge of the circuit court in Ohio. At the right center of the picture in military costume with a palm leaf fan shows the secretary

Entire convention went crazy after Burton had made nominating talk.

Convention Hall, Chicago, June 18.—Hardly had Burton finished his nominating speech when a tumult arose throughout the entire building. Delegates threw their flags into the air, cheering like mad. Then came the procession.

Within fifteen minutes five hundred and fifty-four delegates from thirty-three states were parading up and down the aisles.

A huge picture of Taft was carried to the front and this was the signal for a renewal of the demonstration.

The Texas delegation climbed on their chairs, waving the famous Texas flag on top of a tall pole.

Even the galleries went wild with enthusiasm and the cheering and flag-waving continued for a half hour before any semblance of quiet could be restored and the nomination continued.

REAL SADNESS IN TUMULT OF TRUE APPROVAL

WEDNESDAY'S DEMONSTRATION FOR ROOSEVELT CAREFULLY ANALYZED.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Says It Was the Fitting Tribute to the President Given by the Representatives of the People.

BY WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE
[Special service to Janesville Gazette.]
[Copyright: 1908, by George Matthews Adams.]

Chicago, June 18.—What a curious thing is a crowd of civilized men and women gathered for some formal occasion. Yesterday afternoon the ablest leg of the great crowd in the Coliseum fell like a great wave on the shores of the place in idle conversation as the proceedings of the convention droned on.

The committee on credentials made its report, and the great crowd lapped it up as the sea laps up the sand—impersonally, uninterested, utterly idle. There was no fight, and evidently the crowd knew there would be no fight.

The regular order proceeded, and Senator Lodge was installed as permanent chairman, and the great crowd—the great buff sea, rocked idly to look at him.

He began to speak with some fervor and little ripples of applause played across the tide.

His earnestness deepened the billows slightly.

It was a wind from out of the deep—for he talked not of tariffs and of the production of lead and steel, and of the tariff on raw silk.

Instead he talked of the things in the heart of the tide that was gently playing in its innumerable fancies about him and around him.

He talked of the problems produced by the coming of invention into human life, and the relation of our new economic conditions to men and their destinies.

It was obviously something that attracted the tide for it grew still.

The voice of Senator Lodge is strong and clear and the words he spoke were simple words, made into simpler sentences strong and convincing because they were earnest.

Once when he had spoken seven or eight minutes, he referred incidentally to the president, and a wave of applause suddenly rumbled the face of the buff sea, and then the speaker pushed through it and went on with his argument.

For he was obviously not looking for applause. He was speaking from his heart and not from his lip and what he said fell upon his hearers' hearts and not upon their ears.

The great crowd knew that it was finding its voice. It was an American citizen speaking to Americans of the problems in the American heart. It was deep speaking with deep. And the waves lulled and were quiet.

HIGHEST PRAISE.

Some Janesville Citizens Grow Enthusiastic on the Subject. The praise of the public is merit's just reward. Nothing in modern times has received the praise accorded "The Little Conqueror." Of some kinds of praise we are skeptical. We doubt the praise of strangers. The highest praise for Janesville people is hearty expression from Janesville people. Doan's Kidney Pills are endorsed in Janesville. No better proof of merit can be had. Here's a case of it. We have plenty more like it. Mrs. D. F. Jones, of 157 Western Ave., Janesville, Wis., says: "I was not free from attacks of backache for a single day during several years past. I used so many remedies without getting any relief that I came to the conclusion that nothing would help me and stopped trying. I went about all bent over, could not straighten up at all and had a dull pain across the loins and a feeling of weakness that made it hard for me even to rise from a chair. At night I would awaken with the feeling that a great weight was breaking my back, and anyone who has suffered from kidney trouble will know what torture I endured. Finally I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and wondered if there was really any use of trying another remedy, but seeing them recommended by people in Janesville I procured a box at the People's Drug Co. and began using them. Gradually I regained strength and the pains and aches finally disappeared. Since I have discontinued their use I have not had an attack of backache nor any symptom of kidney trouble, and I believe Doan's Kidney Pills worthy of all the praise that I can give them." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents.

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE
When the republican national convention went wild yesterday, and wave after wave of applause swept over the great auditorium for an hour, there was no fear that a stampede for President Roosevelt would follow. For it was an expression of love and gratitude from an audience of representative Americans, who believed the president sincere when he declined to be a candidate.
It was a tribute to the man, and a final endorsement of "well done," sincere and spontaneous. The words which caused the great demonstration were spoken by the presiding officer, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. They were timely words and wisely uttered.
"In the great American electorate money has few votes, but it can command many voices and cause many birds to sing. The result is that the president is the best abused and the most popular man in the United States today. . . . He has been more abused than any president except Lincoln, Washington and Grant. He possesses the love and confidence of the American people today to a degree never equaled by any president except Lincoln and Washington." It would be difficult to crowd into a single sentence an eulogy more expressive. When the tumult subsided, Mr. Lodge continued, as though uninterrupted:
"Anyone who attempts to use his (Roosevelt's) name as a candidate for the presidency, impugns both his sincerity and his good faith, two of the president's greatest and most conspicuous qualities, upon which no shadow has ever been cast. That man is no friend to Theodore Roosevelt, and does not cherish his name and fame, who now, for any motive, seeks to urge him as a candidate for the great office which he has finally declined." This note of finality called for no applause, but its significance was fully appreciated, and the convention was again ready for business.
The opposition to Taft has melted away like dew, and back of the harmony which will prevail, when the session closes, is a desire on the part of the people to endorse the man selected by the president.
THE INJUNCTION PLANK
The injunction plank, which has caused so much trouble, and for which the president, Secretary Taft, and Mr. Compers, contended, was passed in committee last night and reads as follows:
"The republican party always has and always will uphold the processes and proceedings of the courts, and has absolute faith in their integrity and uprightness; nevertheless, it believes that the injunction practices should be so modified as to provide that only where irreparable damage to property is imminent the courts may grant injunctions without notice. It is also specified that due notice shall be given of impending injunction proceedings."
This, of course, commits the party, and also demands that the republican majority in the next congress, pass laws restricting injunction authority now possessed by the courts. It is a case of principle with the president, of self-interest with the labor leader, Mr. Compers, and of stage fright with Secretary Taft and the committee.
The National Manufacturers' association, and all other employers of labor, oppose this plank, for it protects picketing and the boycott, and encourages rioting and lawlessness. Under the present law, organized labor can be enjoined from interfering with business, and the knowledge of this fact frequently acted as a wholesome restraint.

While it has an appearance of victory for organized labor, on its face, it will prove disastrous in the end, for it means halting the day when the open shop will become universal, and when no man will need protecting in his right to work.

WHY THEY MOURN
The National Brewers' convention, recently held in Milwaukee, was largely devoted to discussing reform measures in the interests of self protection. There was good reason for alarm, from a business standpoint, for the law and order movement was being felt in depleted trade and loss of patronage.
Just how badly the brewers and distillers have been hit, is shown by the first quarter's report of the revenue department which says:
"The decrease in the internal revenue receipts for 1908, as compared with 1907, is as follows:
For January, the decrease in revenue on whiskey production was $470,533.65
For January, the decrease in revenue on beer production was $22,580.71
For February, the decrease in revenue on whiskey production was $1,334,867.91
For February, the decrease in revenue on beer production was $187,289.86
For March, the decrease in revenue on whiskey production was $2,543,210.25
For March, the decrease in revenue on beer production was $402,262.50
Grand total decrease in revenue on liquor production for three months $4,856,741.88
"This decrease in the revenue from the production of distilled and fermented liquors is greater than any decrease at any time in the past fifty years and shows beyond the question of a doubt that the temperance crusade is beginning to tell in a way that counts."
"No wonder that the United States Brewers' association want to make the people think that they are going to be good. The internal revenue receipts show that the falling off of the production of beer in the last nine months has amounted in value to about $10,000,000."
"The decrease in the production of distilled liquors is also very alarming. In four months' time in the states of Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Maryland the number of gallons of whiskey produced was fewer than the number produced in corresponding months of last year by 1,000,000, and the present decrease in the state of Kentucky is running from 57 to 70 per cent a month. If the present rate of decrease is kept up, the United States Brewers' association will probably be holding another 'reform convention' before the summer is over."

If Taft is nominated and elected, gossip says that Congressman Cooper will become a member of his cabinet. The two men were together on the Philippine commission, and are warm personal friends. Many people are wondering how Cooper could afford to line up with the Wisconsin federal hope contingency.
State Senator Lackney of Waukesha stated on the floor of the national convention yesterday that it would be difficult to carry Wisconsin for the man about to be nominated. That's the kind of loyalty which has cursed the state for the past four years.
Ex-Mayor Becker of Milwaukee has retired from the gubernatorial race, and the chances are that Governor Davidson will have a clear field and no opposition. The campaign will be destitute of balloons and fireworks.
The state of Florida has a primary election whenever the spirit moves. The one now in progress is to ratify results announced at the regular primary last April.

TO MOTHERS.
Recently a business man, pointing to a woman and a young girl who were going up the street together, said to one of the scribblers:
"Do you know that woman?"
"No."
"Well, ostensibly she is a lady. She knows how to appear in public and has the attire of respectable homes. In reality, as some of the men about town well know, she is a depraved woman. She dresses well and preserves appearances. She has not been turned out of society because she has not been exposed."
"And the young girl who is with her—evidently she is intimate with the woman. Doubtless she is a pure girl. She will not be so long if she associates with that woman. I wish I knew her father. I would like to warn him. Couldn't you put something in the paper about dangerous women of that kind?"
Which set the editor to thinking.
For it is quite true that many mothers warn their daughters against evil minded men, but are not careful concerning evil minded women. And yet—
A MORALLY DEBASED WOMAN IS TENFOLD MORE DANGEROUS TO AN INNOCENT GIRL THAN A MORALLY BAD MAN.
Naturally a woman is able to get closer to a girl. And from a sullied woman a girl will learn only the alluring side of sin. There will be nothing said concerning the woes of transgression. There will be nothing said concerning the awful decline and the wretched end. And bearing but the one side the girl is likely to be tempted, tainted, ruined.
The woman here referred to is not exactly a ginhouse, but IN EFFECT THAT IS WHAT SHE IS. She may not literally hand the girl over to evil ways of living. Nevertheless she will damn the girl body and soul. The poison will do its work.
Mothers—
As you love your daughters be sure you know the sort of woman with whom she may be intimate.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Elvira Cargill.
Mrs. Elvira Cargill, who formerly resided in Janesville, passed away yesterday at the Hotel Beloit in New York city. She was born in New York city, Nov. 3, 1811, and was married to John Cargill April 17, 1829. Mrs. Cargill departed this life August 18, 1896. Mrs. Cargill was the sister of the late Andrew T. Hart, and is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Mary C. Oles, of this city. She also leaves six grand children and seven great grand children. After leaving Janesville Mrs. Cargill made her home with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hart.
The remains will arrive here Friday morning at 11:17 over the North-western road. They will be taken to Oak Hill and services will be conducted in the chapel.
Frederick Buchholz.
The funeral services of the late Frederick Buchholz, were held this morning at ten o'clock from the home of Mr. Buchholz's son-in-law, John Hoffmann, who resides on Belmont Ave., Rev. W. P. Christy officiated. The remains were taken to Beloit for interment.
Dr. Cunningham Buys Auto: Dr. M. A. Cunningham has purchased a Maxwell runabout and joined the ranks of the local automobilists.
Marriage License: A marriage license has been issued to Estella Winn and Harry Kinton, both of Beloit.
Responded to False Alarm: In response to a still alarm from the Janesville Machine Co. plant, responsibility unknown, the fire department last evening hurried to the scene only to discover that there was no semblance of a blaze in that locality. A new night watchman who came running out of one of the buildings when the wagons stopped was as thoroughly surprised as anyone.
Hotels Are Full: F. S. Sheldon, who is one of the assistant sergeants-at-arms of the National Republican convention, returned to Janesville last evening owing to the fact that accommodations here are so full that accommodations can not be had at any price. He returned to Chicago this morning to be present at the closing sessions of the gathering.
Rug Merchant O. K.: Complaint was received at the police station this morning to the effect that a stranger was peddling rugs in the Fourth ward without a license. This afternoon Officer Patrick Fanning took a man claiming to represent the C. D. Lisle firm, 200 Fifth street, Milwaukee, in tow but when they reached the city clerk's office it was found that the man had only been soliciting orders by sample, delivered to be made by mail, and that the local ordinance requiring a license did not cover this phase of the business. The officers are also looking for a man dressed in gray who has been selling hand rings on Caroline street.

New Sidewalk: The old brick walk on the Milwaukee street side of the old Mitchell property on west Milwaukee street has been torn out and a new walk is being put in. While the work on the Marion street side was torn up a year or so ago and a new cement walk put in, the others have been left unimproved. This place was a bad one for pedestrians in rainy and stormy weather and in the winter it was especially so.

BICYCLE AND RIDER STRUCK BY AN AUTO

Walter J. Rice Seriously Injured in an Upset on Magnolia Avenue Last Evening.
Walter J. Rice of the paint firm of Model & Rice was thrown from his bicycle and seriously injured in a rear-end collision with an automobile last evening. The touringcar was driven by William Alderman of the Janesville Garage Co. and was moving down from the golf links on the right side of the highway, at a fair rate of speed, when Mr. Rice wheeled out of his yard at No. 16 Magnolia avenue and also started for the right side of the road. Mr. Alderman says that he sounded the horn and tried to turn out in such a fashion as to escape colliding the four-wheeler, but that the two vehicles were so close together that he could not avoid striking the bike with the running board. Mr. Rice was flung to the side of the road and his mount was pitched a few feet in the same direction. After the injured man was assisted to his home and Dr. R. W. Golden had made an examination, it was found that no bones were broken. Mr. Rice, however, complained of severe pain in his back and there was an ugly scalp wound. He was confined to his home today and the question as to whether or not he has sustained any lasting internal injuries has not been determined. Mr. Alderman says that he was not driving the auto at a rate faster than 12 miles an hour and that he did all that could have been done, aside from deliberately wrecking his machine, to avoid the contact.

IMPRESSIVE JUNE WEDDING CEREMONY

Miss Agnes Richards and Frank W. Drake Took Vows in Presence of Sixty Friends Last Evening.
The marriage of Miss Agnes Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Richards of this city, and Frank W. Drake, son of Mrs. Edith Drake of Spokane, Wash., was celebrated at half past six o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents, 61 Palm street. The ceremony was a simple but impressive one. As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Tacie Scott, were borne to the ear of the expectant guests, the young couple, unattended, descended the stairway, slowly traversing the intervening space, and took their places before an embankment of waxen white syringa and roses.
The bride was attired in a gown of white novelty silk, bordered with lace, and carried a bouquet of roses of the same hue. Rev. R. C. Dawson read the marriage service and following the hearty congratulations, a delicious supper was served in three courses.
The wedding-color scheme was in pink and white. The pleasing effect of the white embankment was heightened by a fringe of white syringa around the room. A profusion of pink roses graced the dining room. From each corner of the bride's table white ribbons, entwined with amaranth and pink roses, extended to the central chandelier from which a bow of the ribbon, amaranth, and roses was draped above a charming bouquet of pink roses. A tiny pink rosebud adorned each napkin.
Guest to the number of over sixty were present. Among those from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thorpe of Bridgeport, S. Dak., great-uncle and aunt of the bride; Mr. Prescott of Mason City, Iowa, cousin of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Glidden and daughter of Britt, Iowa; Miss Helen Standish of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Richards and Owen Richards of Oregon, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Richards and daughter, Mrs. Ransom and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Richards of Brooklyn; Mrs. Sarah Richards of Evansville; Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Thorpe, Milton Junction; Robert Emerson of Iowa and L. A. Aspinwall of Port Atkinson.
The bride is popular with a large circle of friends and was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents. Mr. Drake is employed as bookkeeper at Mitchell's lumber yard and is both well known and highly esteemed here. The happy young couple cleverly planned the method of their departure and succeeded in catching the interurban at the substation without being showered with rice, much to the chagrin of those who watched and waited long and late at both the C. & N. W. and C. M. & St. Paul depots. They will spend their honeymoon at Lake Kegonsa. The sincere congratulations of a host of friends go with them.

DEAN M'GINNITY IS WORSE TODAY

Doctors' Report of the Condition of Rev. Dean E. M. McGinnity Not So Favorable.
Dean McGinnity's condition has taken a slight turn for the worse today. His condition has remained about the same for the past three or four days, but today he was weaker. His condition is now very serious.

Anna Lander of Janesville left last Saturday for Johnsons Creek where she will visit with her sister, Cora Lander.
Two False Alarms: Last night about eight-thirty o'clock the fire department answered an alarm coming from the Janesville Machine company and another from the same place at eleven o'clock this morning. There was a misarrangement in the electrical apparatus connecting the fire station and the alarm box in the building.

HAS OIL BEEN FOUND ON FARM SOUTH OF CITY?

REPORTED THAT DUNCAN SIMPSON OF DELDOT DISCOVERS OILY SUBSTANCE

IT IS BEING ANALYZED

If It Shows Signs of Being a Valuable Deposit Wells Will Be Sunk and the Property Prospected.
Down in the town of Deloit, on the farm owned by Duncan Simpson in section 9, signs of oil have been discovered that give promise of developing into a valuable deposit of oil.
This is the report that came from Deloit today. It is also said that Mr. Simpson has taken samples of the oily substance found on his farm and has them analyzed by professor J. C. Pearson of the Deloit High School, who found a large percentage of pure oil. Mr. Simpson's discovery was brought about by the report from Rockford that oil had been discovered north of that city and wells were to be sunk. He noticed an oily substance on a bit of work land on a small side hill where water had collected and began his investigations. Several years ago a similar discovery was made near Cahokia, at Lake Koshkonong, but nothing was ever done with the plans for wells at that time.
It is possible that Rock county is lying over a huge reservoir of oil and that valuable funds may be discovered by exploration of the sub-strata.
Mr. Simpson is to have the tests made more thorough before he sinks any wells.

PICKPOCKET SENT TO STATE PRISON

George Conklin Pleaded Guilty in Municipal Court This Morning and Will Serve One Year.
George Conklin, who was arrested by Chief Appleby last Saturday morning on the charge of stealing a silver watch and gold chain valued at $10 from Charles Eason, on the previous evening, appeared in municipal court this morning and pleaded guilty to the charge. He is 28 years old, though at first glance he looked like a youth of 18 or 20; that he had left a mother some time ago in Bridgeport, Conn., but did not know as to whether or not she was still living; that he had been traveling with Kingling Bros., circus until recently; and that indulgence in strong drink was to blame for his disquieted act. Although he claimed that he had never been behind the bars before, his evident familiarity with such details of court procedure as waiting examination, etc., and the neat fashion in which he detached Eason's watch and chain, portion of the trousers' pocket and suspender button to which the outfit was anchored with the latter's own knife which he abstracted from a coat pocket, convinced the officers that he is an old offender. Judge Fitch sentenced him to spend one year in the state's prison at Waupun, the first day to be in solitary confinement.

The company has in its mine 220 tons of jack for which $30 per ton has been refused. Janesville stockholders are happy as the mine gives promise of a big dividend payer.

SEEK TO ESTABLISH OLD TITLE TO LANDS

Question Once Passed on by Local Attorney Raised Again by Eastern Lawyers.

In an attempt to establish the title to certain Wisconsin lands a firm of eastern attorneys is inquiring into the title, as it now stands. The tract in question contains 640 acres and is part of lands conveyed in a deed by Martin King to Edridge M. Fish, March 28, 1833. The original deed, which is recorded in the plantation office of Whitehall, London, England, conveys all that land from the Falls of St. Anthony running on the east bank and as far south as the south end of Lake Pepin, where the Chippewa river joins the Mississippi. This tract contained about 6,819,340 acres and took in all of what is now Pierce, Popple, Dunn, Eau Claire, Chippewa, Grant, Polk, Clark and Taylor counties and parts of Iron, Ashland, Macdonald, Wood, Jackson, Trempealeau, Buffalo, Sawyer, Barron, Polk and St. Croix counties and Ramsey and Washington counties in Minnesota. The grants were two chiefs of the Naudowessie tribe, Hawnopowjatin, the turtle, and Otontongomishew, the snake, and the deed which was given at the Great Cave on May 1, 1767, conveyed to Jonathan Carver the land above mentioned.

About ten years ago, attorney M. O. Mount, of this city received a request from an attorney in Dover, Del., asking him to look into the question of the title to this land. Among the papers sent to him was the deed of Jonathan Carver to a descendant of his through whom claim of the Delaware attorney claimed the land. On looking into the matter Mr. Mount found that the question of this grant had been in the United States court of claims and also before Congress and that in each case the grant by the Indians had not been recognized. Mr. Mount so informed the Delaware attorney. It would now seem that a further attempt was being made to set up a title through this grant from the Indians.

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. Also you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Chapter Twenty

OFTEN there are clever brains about us of whose workings we care nothing so far as they serve to the betterment of our lives or the more scientific brushing and folding of our clothes. Humors and philosophers have described or conjectured or caricatured the world of those who wait on us, but it is to consider how we may appear to the inward gaze of the eyes which are so obediently cast down before ours or so dutifully alert to anticipate our orders. As a rule, we delectate the function. The task seems at once difficult and unnecessary. Enough to remember that the owners of the eyes have ears and mouths also! A small lock left unattended will empty the largest cash in fact. It is well to keep that in mind both in private concerns and in affairs of public magnitude.

The king's body servant, Emilio Lepage, had been set to thinking. This was the result of the various and profound reflections which he had undergone for calling young Count Alexis "prince." The king's brief, sharp words at the conference had been elaborated into a reproach both longer and sterner than his majesty was wont to trouble himself to administer. He had been, very strong on the utter folly of putting such ideas into the boy's head. Lepage was pretty clear that the idea had come from the boy's head into his, but he said nothing more of that. The boy himself scolded Lepage, first for having been overheard, second, and as Lepage guessed, after being scolded himself very soundly, for using the offending title at all. Meekly Lepage bore this cross also, indeed, with some amusement and a certain touch of pity for young Alexis, who was not a prince and obviously could not make out why.

In the books a king's sons were always princes, even though there were, as in those glorious days there often were, fifty or three score of them. Then Countess Ellenburg scolded him. The king's "It's absurd!" was ringing in her head. Her scolding was in her best manner, very religious. She called Heaven to witness that never by word or deed had she done anything to give her boy such a notion. The days are gone by when Heaven makes overt present nuzzles. Nothing happened. She roundly charged Lepage with fostering the idea for his own purposes. He wanted to set the Prince of Slavonia against his little brother, she supposed, and to carry favor with the rising sun at the poor child's cost.

She was very effective, but she missed Lepage almost beyond endurance. By disposition he was thoroughly good natured if a trifle and impulsive. He could not suffer the necessity of having injured the pretty boy for his own ends. It was both odd and absurd. He snipped back smartly at her. "I hope nobody will do more to put wrong ideas in his head than I have done, Miss Countess." In a fury she drove him from the room, but she had started over so slightly. Lepage's alert brain jumped at the signal.

Finally Stenovsky himself had a lecture for poor, much lectured Lepage. It was one of the misadventures to which an overcautious cunning is prone. Stenovsky was gentle and considerate, but he was very urgent—urgent above all that nothing should be said about the episode, neither about it nor about the other reprehensions. Silence, silence, silence was his burden. Lepage thought more and more. It is better to put up with gossip than to give the idea that the least gossip would be a serious offense. People gossip without thinking. It's easy come and easy gone, easy speaking and easy forgetting, but stringent injunctions not to talk are apt to make men think. References to the rising sun also may breed reflection in the satellites of a setting orb. Neither Countess Ellenburg nor General Stenovsky had been as well advised as usual in this essentially trumpery matter.

In short, personages had been betrayed. Whence came it? What did it mean? If it meant anything, could Lepage turn that thing to account? The king's favorite attendant was no favorite with Countess Ellenburg. For Lepage, too, the time might be very short. He would not follow the boy, the angry mother had believed, or at least suggested, but, without question of that, there was no harm in a man's looking out for himself, or if there were Lepage was clear in thinking that the countess and the general were not fit preachers of such a highly exacting gospel.

Lepage concluded that he had something to sell. His wares were a suspicion and a fact. Selling the suspicion wronged nobody. He would give no warranty with it—except caution. Selling the fact was disobedience to the king, his master. "Disobedience, yes; injury, no," said Lepage, with a bit of casuistry. Besides, the king, too, had scolded him.

Moreover, the Prince of Slavonia had always treated M. Emilio Lepage with distinguished consideration. The Bourbon blood, no doubt, stretched out hands to him in belle France in M. Lepage's person.

Something to sell? Who was his buyer? Whose interest could be won by his suspicion, whose friendship bought with his fact? The thoughtful buyer was plain enough, but Lepage could not go to Pradolok, and he did not approve of correspondence, especially with Colonel Stenovsky, in practical control of the household. He sought a go-between and a personal interview. At least he could take a walk. The servants were not prisoners. Even conspirators must stop somewhere on pain of doing their own cooking and the rest. At a quarter past 8 in the evening, having given the king his dinner and made him comfortable for the next two hours, Lepage sallied forth and took the road to Slavonia. He was very carefully dressed, wore a flower in his buttonhole and had dropped a discreet hint about a lady in conversation with his peers. If ladies of demand exonerate they may furnish them too. Present seriousness involved him from bygone frivolity.

At 10 o'clock he returned, still moist spruce and orderly and with a well satisfied air about him. He had found a purchaser for his suspicion and his fact. His pocket was the better lined, and he had received flattering expressions of gratitude and assurances of favor. He felt that he had raised a fortress against future assaults of fortune. He entered the king's dressing room in his usual noiseless and unobtrusive manner. He was not aware that General Stenovsky had quitted it just a quarter of an hour before, bearing in his hand a document which he had submitted for his majesty's signature. The king had signed it and indicated the cover "Urgent."

"Ah, Lepage, where have you been?" asked the king.

"Just to get a little air and drink a glass of the Golden Lion."

"You look gay than that?" smiled the king. Evidently his anger had passed. Perhaps he wished to show as much to an old servant whom he liked and valued.

Conscience stricken, or so appearing, Lepage tore the flower from his coat. "I beg your majesty's pardon. I ought to have removed it before entering your majesty's presence, but I was told you wished to retire at once, sir, so I hurried here immediately."

"The king gave a weary yawn. "Yes, I'll go to bed at once, Lepage, and let me sleep as long as I can. This fog and of life isn't very amusing." He passed his hand wearily over his brow. "My head aches. Can't the room very close, Lepage? Open the window."

"It has begun to rain, sir."

"Never mind. Let's have the rain too. At least it's fresh."

Lepage opened a window which looked over the Krath. The king rose. Lepage hastened to offer his arm, which his majesty accepted. They went together to the window. A sudden storm had gathered. Rain was pelted down in big drops.

"It looks like being a rough night," remarked the king.

"I'm afraid it does, sir," Lepage agreed.

"We're lucky to be going to our beds."

"Very, sir," answered Lepage, wondering whose opposite fate his majesty was plotting.

"I shouldn't care, even if I were a young man and a sound one, to ride to Pradolok tonight."

"To Pradolok, sir? There was surprise in Lepage's voice. He could not help it. Luckily it sounded quite natural to the king. It was certainly not a night to ride five and twenty miles and into the hills unless your business was very urgent.

"Yes, to Pradolok. I've had my breath of air. You can shut the window, Lepage."

The king returned to the fireplace and stood warming himself. Lepage closed the window, drew the curtains and came to the middle of the room, where he stood in respectful readiness, and underneath that a very lively curiosity.

"Yes," said the king slowly, "Captain Markart goes to Pradolok tonight with a dispatch for his royal highness, you know. Business, Lepage, urgent business! Everything must yield to that."

The king enunciated this virtuous maxim as though it had been the rule of his life. "No time to lose, Lepage, so the captain goes tonight, but I'm afraid he'll have a rough ride—very rough."

"I'm afraid so, sir," said Lepage, and added secretly in his thoughts, "And so will M. Zerkowitch."

Captain Markart was entirely of his majesty's opinion as he set out on his journey to Pradolok. His ride would be rough, dark and solitary—the last by Stenovsky's orders. Markart was not afraid. He was well armed, but he expected to be very bored and knew that he would be very wet by the time he reached the castle. He breathed a fervent curse on the necessity of state, of which the minister had informed him, as he buttoned up his heavy cavalry overcoat and rode across the bridge on to the main road on the right bank an hour before midnight.

"Th' most perilous iv human occupations are usually th' lowest paid. An' why is this so? Is it because we're not afraid iv death? Faith, no, but because we don't know anything about it. ### HERE'S PRETTY POINT OF LAW.

Full Confidence Between the Accused and His Defender.

The ethics of the difference between the professional opinion of a paid advocate and the honest conviction of a learned man were set forth by a well-known English barrister who died recently. It was a case of murder, and the client and counsel were closeted together. "Smith," said the barrister, "of course, I know you didn't murder the man, but, as a matter of fact, did you do it with the butt end of a revolver or with a stick?"

"Sir," said Smith, "I swear I am innocent." "I know that perfectly well, but you must tell me. For if you did it with a revolver I shall say to the prosecution, 'produce the stick!' and if you did it with a stick, I shall say, 'produce the revolver!'" The client paused and scratched his head meditatively. "It was the butt end of a revolver, sir." "That's right!" said the counsel; "I think I can get you off now."

Remember These Blessings.

It is well for persons not contented with their lot to remember that even a Croesus cannot eat more than three meals, or sleep more than eight hours a day with comfort, and that most of the purest pleasures in life are free to all capable of appreciating them.

Dr. Brown of Edinburgh, author of "Rab and His Friends," said in musing over such thoughts:

"What a blessing it is to be able to enjoy these innocent plain things—a bit of green earth, of the sky, a flower, a child's eye twinkling from under the long eyelashes, these are the common things which I would not give up for the treasures of silver and gold."

Jealousy is a Sham. Jealousy is a terrible thing. It resembles love, only it is precisely love's contrary. Instead of wishing for the welfare of the object loved, it desires the dependence of that object upon itself and its own triumph. Love is the forgetfulness of self; jealousy is the most passionate form of egotism.

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. Also you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Chapter Twenty

OFTEN there are clever brains about us of whose workings we care nothing save so far as they serve to the defter moving of our dishes or the more scientific brushing and folding of our clothes. Humors and philosophers have described the world of those who wait on us, telling us to consider how we may appear to the inward gaze of the eyes which are so obediently cast down before ours or so dutifully averted to anticipate our orders. As a rule, we delectate the invitation. The task seems at once difficult and unnecessary. Enough to remember that the owners of the eyes have ears and mouths also! A small leak left unattended will empty the largest cask at last. It is well to keep that in mind both in private concerns and in affairs of public magnitude.

The king's body servant, Enlio Lepage, had been set a-thinking. This was the result of the various and profuse sealings which he had undergone for calling young Count Alexia "prince." The king's brief, sharp words at the conference had been elaborated into a reproach both longer and sterner than his majesty was wont to trouble himself to administer. He had been very strong on the utter futility of putting such ideas into the boy's head. Lepage was pretty clear that the idea had come from the boy's head into his, but he said nothing more of that. The boy himself seemed Lepage, first for having been overheard, second, and as Lepage guessed, after being scolded himself very roundly, for using the offending title at all. Meekly Lepage bore this cross also, indeed, with some amusement and a certain touch of pity for young Alexia, who was not a prince and obviously could not make out a prince in the books a king's sons were always princes, even though there were, as in those glorious days there often were, fifty or three score of them.

Then Countess Ellenburg scolded him. The king's "it is absurd!" was ringing sorely in her mind. Her scolding was in her best manner, very religious. She called Heaven to witness that never by word or deed had she done anything to give her boy such a notion. The days are gone by when Heaven makes overt present answer. Nothing happened. She roundly charged Lepage with fostering the idea for his own purposes. He wanted to see the Prince of Savana against his little brother, she supposed, and to curry favor with the rising sun at the poor child's cost.

She was very effective, but she angered Lepage almost beyond endurance. By disposition he was thoroughly good natured if a trifle and impulsive. He could not suffer the accusation of having injured the pretty boy for his own ends. It was both odd and absurd. He snatched back smartly at her. "I hope nobody will do more to put wrong ideas in his head than I have done, Miss Countess." In a fury she drove him from the room, but she had started over so slightly. Lepage's next brain jump at the king's.

Finally Stenoves himself had a lecture for poor, much lectured Lepage. It was one of the misadventures to which an overcautious cunning is prone. Stenoves was gentle and considerate, but he was very urgent—urgent above all that nothing should be said about the episode, neither about it nor about the other reprehensions. Silence, silence, silence was his burden. Lepage thought more and more. It is better to put up with gossip than to give the idea that the least gossip would be a serious offense. People gossip without thinking. It's easy come and easy go, and stringent injunctions not to talk are apt to make men think. References to the rising sun also may breed reflection in the satellites of a setting orb. Neither Countess Ellenburg nor General Stenoves had been as well advised as usual in this essentially trumpery matter.

In short, nervousness had been betrayed. Whence came it? What did it mean? If it meant anything, could Lepage turn that thing to account? The king's favorite attendant was no favorite with Countess Ellenburg. For Lepage, too, the time might be very short. He would not injure the boy, as the angry mother had believed, or at least suggested, but without question of that, there was no harm in a man's looking out for himself, or if there were Lepage was clear in thinking that the countess and the general were not at preachers of such a highly exacting gospel.

Lepage concluded that he had something to sell. His wares were a suspicion and a fact. Selling the suspicion wronged nobody. He would give no warranty with it—except emptier. Selling the fact was disobedience to the king, his master. "Disobedience, yes; injury, no," said Lepage, with a bit of casuistry. Besides, the king, too, had scolded him.

Moreover, the Prince of Savana had always treated M. Enlio Lepage with distinguished consideration. The Bourbon blood, no doubt, stretched out hands to him in belle France in M. Lepage's person.

Something to sell! Who was his buyer? Whose interest could be won by his suspicion, whose friendship bought with his fact? The ultimate buyer was plain enough, but Lepage could not go to Praskak, and he did not approve of correspondence, especially with Colonel Stenitz, in practical control of the household. He sought a go-between and a personal interview. At least he could take a walk. The servants were not prisoners. Even conspirators must stop somewhere on pain of doing their own cooking and the rest. At a quarter past 8 in the evening, having given the king his dinner and made him comfortable for the next two hours, Lepage sallied forth and took the road to Savana. He was very carefully dressed, wore a flower in his buttonhole and had dropped a discreet hint about a lady in conversation with his peers. If ladies of demand excuses they may furnish them too. Present seriousness invoked aid from hygiene fervently.

At 10 o'clock he returned, still moist spruce and orderly and with a well-satisfied air about him. He had found a purchaser for his suspicion and his fact. His pocket was the better lined, and he had received flattering expressions of gratitude and assurances of favor. He felt that he had raised a fortress against future assaults of fortune. He entered the king's dressing room in his usual noiseless and unobtrusive manner. He was not aware that General Stenoves had waited just a quarter of an hour before, bearing in his hand a document which he had submitted for his majesty's signature. The king had signed it and endorsed the cover "urgent."

"Ah, Lepage, where have you been?" asked the king.
"Just to get a little air and drink a glass of the Golden Lion."
"You look gay, then that?" smiled the king. Evidently his anger had passed. Perhaps he wished to show as much to an old servant whom he liked and valued.

Conscience stricken, or so appearing, Lepage tore the flower from his coat. "I beg your majesty's pardon. I ought to have removed it before entering your majesty's presence, but I was told you wished to retire at once, sir, so I hurried here immediately."

The king gave a weary yawn. "Yes, I'll go to bed at once, Lepage, and let me sleep as long as I can. This fog and of life isn't very amusing." He passed his hand wearily over his brow. "My head aches. Don't the room very close, Lepage? Open the window."

"It has begun to rain, sir."

"Never mind. Let's have the rain too. At least it's fresh." Lepage opened a window which looked over the knith. The king rose. Lepage hastened to offer his arm, which his majesty accepted. They went together to the window. A sudden storm had gathered. Rain was pelting down in big drops.

"It looks like being a rough night," remarked the king.

"I'm afraid it does, sir," Lepage agreed.

"We're lucky to be going to our beds."

"Very, sir," answered Lepage, wondering whose opposite fate his majesty was pitying.

"I shouldn't care, even if I were a young man and a sound one, to ride to Praskak tonight."

"To Praskak, sir?" There was surprise in Lepage's voice. He could not help it. Luckily it sounded quite natural to the king. It was certainly not a night to ride five and twenty miles and into the hills unless your business was very urgent.

"Yes, to Praskak. I've had my breath of air. You can shut the window, Lepage."

The king returned to the dressing and stood warming himself. Lepage closed the window, drew the curtains and came to the middle of the room, where he stood in respectful readiness, and underneath that a very lively curiosity.

"Yes," said the king slowly. "Captain Markant goes to Praskak tonight with a dispatch for his royal highness, you know. Business, Lepage, urgent business! Everything must yield to that."

The king culminated this virtuous maxim as though it had been the rule of his life. "No time to lose, Lepage, so the captain goes tonight, but I'm afraid he'll have a rough ride—very rough."

"I'm afraid so, sir," said Lepage, and added strictly to his thoughts, "And so will M. Zerkovitch."

Captain Markant was entirely of his majesty's opinion as he set out on his journey to Praskak. His ride would be rough, dark and solitary—the last by Stenoves' orders. Markant was not afraid. He was well armed, but he expected to be very wet and knew that he would be very wet by the time he reached the castle. He breathed a fervent curse on the necessity of state, of which the minister had informed him, as he buttoned up his heavy cavalry overcoat and rode across the bridge on to the main road on the right bank an hour before midnight.

"LEAVES THEIR TIME TO FALL."

"Mr. Dooley's" Discourse as to the Everlasting Foe.

"The most perilous iv human occupations are usually the lowest paid. An' why is this so? Is it because we're not afraid iv death? Path, no, but because we don't appreciate it. If our simple minds could grasp th' sub-fleck th' bravest man in th' world would be found under th' bed sobbing. It's there but it isn't there. It happens to iv'rybody but ye can't see it happen to yerself. Ye walk briskly up to it or maybe ye even run. Ye never see it till it's too late an' th' 'tis too late to recognize it. 'Tis no good runnin' away fr'm it. Many a man dodgin' a throlley car has been run over be an autyomobile. Ye hide fr'm th' lightning an' a mickraok lands ye. Ye avoid railroad trains an' boats an' scratch y'er thumb with a carpet tack an' 'tis all over. Ye expect it fr'm wan side iv th' street an' it comes fr'm th' other. Ye think that must be it in th' black ahead an' ye make up y'er mind to walk slow when it steps up behind ye, slaps ye on th' back an' says: 'Ye're wanted at headquarters. Ye'd better come along peaceable.' To which, havin' no further int'raw, ye make no reply. 'Tis th' fr't time th' ye've have an understandin' an' a fear iv death—if ye were alive. But ye are dead."—P. P. Dunne, in the American Magazine.

HERE'S PRETTY POINT OF LAW.
Full Confidence between the Accused and His Defender.

The ethics of the difference between the professional opinion of a paid advocate and the honest conviction of a learned man were set forth by a well-known English barrister who died recently. It was a case of murder, and the client and counsel were closeted together. "Smith," said the barrister, "of course, I know you didn't murder the man, but, as a matter of fact, did you do it with the butt end of a revolver or with a stick?"

"Sir," said Smith, "I swear I am innocent." "I know that perfectly well, but you must tell me. For if you did it with a revolver I shall say to the prosecution, 'produce the stick!' and if you did it with a stick, I shall say, 'produce the revolver!'" The client paused and scratched his head meditatively. "It was the butt end of a revolver, sir." "That's right!" said the counsel; "I think I can get you off now."

Remember These Blessings.
It is well for persons not contented with their lot to remember that even a Croesus cannot eat more than three meals, or sleep more than eight hours a day with comfort, and that most of the purest pleasures in life are free to all capable of appreciating them. Dr. Brown of Edinburgh, author of "Hob and His Friends," said in musing over such thoughts:

"What a blessing it is to be able to enjoy these innocent plain things—a bit of green earth, of the sky, a flower, a child's eye twinkling from under the long eyelashes, these are the common things which I would not give up for the treasures of silver and gold."

Jealousy a Sham.
Jealousy is a terrible thing. It resembles love, only it is precisely love's contrary. Instead of wishing for the welfare of the object loved, it desires the dependence of that object upon itself and its own triumph. Love is the forgetfulness of self; jealousy is the most passionate form of egotism.

REAL SADNESS IN TUMULT OF TRUE APPROVAL

And then not while he was at a climax, but as the man before them was reaching deeper and deeper into the soul of the place and the occasion, the abject lip of the crowd hushed, and in the great silence the man spoke, simply and strongly and without oratorical flourish or emphasis.

"He has enforced the laws as he found them and so he is the best, abused and most popular man in America."

It was not much of a tribute. But a wave of sincere feeling swept over the quiet tide of humanity.

It was not a strong wave, not much stronger than the first wave that came rolling in.

But another wave followed it, and another higher and stronger came after it.

The speaker, who did not realize what was about to come, put out his hand to beg for silence, but a huge wave of applause came over him, and he ducked and backed off good-naturedly and let the wind of emotion play as it would across the restless sea before him.

In another minute, or perhaps two, Senator Lodge rose again to face the rising tide, but it rolled in on him with a great roar, and men knew that the storm of applause had come which Theodore Roosevelt's work as an American citizen had conjured.

So they let it rage, and for nearly an hour the waves of that storm broke and roared in that place.

Then the crowd in that hour of joy gathered individuals in and they ceased to be individuals, and became the crowd.

At times the delegation were swept up their feet.

State after state rose, like black billows on the face of the waters, and cheered and waved pennants and sank to equilibrium, only to ruffle up again, and cheer with the crowd.

No state was able to keep its mooring. And in the tumult and the shouting there were no reactionaries. New York was no holier than Wisconsin, and Kansas joined Pennsylvania.

"Roosevelt, Roosevelt," four years more," they roared, and the cry skinned over the waves of applause like a gull, and like a gull it was evanescent.

It signified nothing. And then slowly when the deep and weaved deep, the calm came and the speaker went on with his speaking.

It was all so simply and so naturally done, all so evidently sincere, without flourish or prearrangement, that there was in its undercurrent an element of sadness.

For it seemed a goodbye rather than a bid to Theodore Roosevelt, and those who have feared him feared him no more, and those who have trusted him were happy, but rather sad than joyful.

When Senator Lodge had finished, those who heard him, felt that they were listening to an orator—not to a spellbinder, for true oratory, we are told, "does not consist in speech. It may not be brought from afar. It consists in the man, in the subject and in the occasion."

And here a sincere, earnest, scholarly man was speaking his heart upon a momentous occasion in history, and what he said had a dignity and an importance far beyond the words he uttered.

And so when he had finished, the waves of conversation flowed silently on the shore, and the hum-drum of events drained on, as though a great

The most striking part of the demonstration is a big linen umbrella painted into gorgeous stripes. The marchers drill with these umbrellas much as the militia would drill with swords. In the background is one of those mobs of people which you will encounter any time and any place in Chicago this week. On the front of the Auditorium Hotel in the extraordinary can be discerned the big electric sign "Uncle Joe Cannon." Three rooms on the second floor are headquarters.

FEAST OF CORPUS CHRISTI OBSERVED

Catholic Churches Everywhere Hold Special Services Today in Memory of Feast.

(Special to the Gazette.)

New York, June 18.—In Catholic churches everywhere special services are held today in commemoration of the feast of Corpus Christi. The feast, which celebrates the institution of the Eucharist, formerly fell on Thursday in Holy Week, but as the Catholic Church observes the passion of Christ that day, the early dignitaries changed the date of the feast.

The blessed Juliana, a holy religious of Liege, Belgium, in the eleventh century, according to the Catholic version, believed that she had seen a vision enjoining her to influence the ecclesiastical authorities to establish such a feast. In 1230, when she became the head of an order, she consulted several theologians and church dignitaries about the vision, with the result that the archbishop of Liege, who afterward became Pope Urban IV, became interested and an office was composed. In 1264, Robert, bishop of Liege, ordered a day set apart for special observance in his diocese. After Juliana's death Henry, the next bishop of Liege, petitioned Urban IV, to establish the feast as a universal one, which that pope did by a bull issued in 1264. Since that time the feast has remained a universal one, and is so celebrated, the office of the day having been composed by St. Thomas Aquinas at the order of Urban IV.

The custom for the Emperor of Austria to take part in the procession of the Corpus Christi festival was begun in the seventeenth century by Ferdinand II, who by his presence succeeded in putting a stop to the religious conflicts between Catholic and Protestant mobs, with which the ceremonies in those days were almost invariably attended. This custom has been observed ever since by the Emperor of Austria.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Beulah, Minn., June 18.—Members of the order of Elks throughout Minnesota assembled here in force today for the annual grand lodge meeting, which will be in session until the end of the week. The convention will receive the annual reports, elect officers for the ensuing year and choose delegates to the national convention to be held in Dallas next month. The entertainment program is an elaborate one. A prominent feature will be native dances by a large band of Red Lake Indians.

The balance of the certificate is in steel engraved black. The announcement is signed by William F. Stone, sergeant-at-arms.

SOUTH CAROLINA TO BE LAUNCHED SOON

Navy Department Has Fixed July 11 As the Date For the Launching in Philadelphia.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Washington, D. C., June 18.—The Navy Department has fixed July 11 as the date for launching the battleship South Carolina, now building at the Cramp shipyard in Philadelphia. The South Carolina is a sister ship to the Michigan, recently launched at Camden, and represents the first attempt of the United States Government to construct a vessel the principal object of which is the carrying of as many heavy guns of even caliber as her displacement will permit. The displacement of the Michigan and the South Carolina is 16,000 tons each as against nominally 17,000 tons of the British Dreadnought class. But it is claimed that either of the American battleships will be able to fire as many guns broadside as can be fired from the five turrets of the Dreadnought.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL PRIVATE MANSION IN NEW YORK AND ITS OWNER SENATOR CLARK.

New York.—The French palace, which Senator W. A. Clark of Montana has erected at the corner of Seventy-seventh and Fifth avenue, is conceded to be the most expensive private mansion in America. The house has cost upwards of $5,000,000.

The house has been called "An old man's pad," and so it is. Every piece of marble, every piece of granite, every piece of wood, every piece of bronze, the work of every laborer, every art object, and every purchase and contract has had the personal attention of the owner, carries out his ideas, reveals his tastes. When in New York, Senator Clark spends days within its walls, watching its progress, giving his opinions, passing upon or rejecting pieces of work, or bits of work.

BIG CLOCK PLANT SHUT DOWN TODAY

Business Has Fallen Off Since Last Fall and Demand For High Grade Goods Small.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Thomaston, Conn., June 18.—The Seth Thomas Clock Company, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world, shut down its plant here today and will not resume operations until some time next month. Business in the better grade of watches and clocks among Connecticut manufacturers has fallen off since last fall and recently the demand for the dollar watches and cheap alarm clocks, which kept up well during the earlier weeks of the depression, has also fallen off noticeably.

New York.—Miss Dorris Keane is said by critics to have the most beautiful profile of any actress on the American stage. Her beautiful nose and well rounded lips and chin are so perfectly molded that many famous artists have sought Miss Keane as a model. She is, however, thoroughly satisfied with her stage career, in which she is having such remarkable success.

JIM JEFFRIES' OPEN AIR ARENA.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The venture of big Jim Jeffries in establishing an immense open air arena for prize fights is a big success. Jeffries confidently expects that he can swing all of the big fights to his place. This should prove a big money maker for Jeffries. Should Burns and Johnson ever get together it will probably be in Big Jim's arena, and with the retired heavyweight as referee.
